

INVESTIGATION IS BEING LAUNCHED INTO SHOOTING

Doolittle Is Making Effort To Mitigate Waukegan Deputy Sheriff

Investigation into the tragedy in which Douglas E. Stouber, 34, of 714 Massena ave., Waukegan, was shot to death early Monday morning following an argument with Deputy Sheriff William Klarkowski, 42, in the Edison Square district, is being launched today.

Klarkowski, arrested by police, is said to have admitted the shooting and he waived preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Henry F. Wallenwein Monday morning and was bound over to the grand jury on a charge of murder. He is being held without bonds and State's Attorney A. V. Smith signed the warrant charging murder against the former deputy, employed under Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle.

Police Called to Restaurant

Upon hearing a call, Lieutenant Earl Hicks and Patrolman Lawrence Kelly rushed to Nolan's Eat Shop No. 2 in the Edison Square district of the city to find that Patrolman Ben True and Cal Hoff were already working the case, while Thomas E. Kennedy was also called in to lead the investigation. According to their report, Stouber and Walter Ludlow, 15, of the Commercial hotel, Highland Park, were in the restaurant for a light lunch before going home. A (Continued on page five)

CONVICT SENTENCED TO PRISON TERM IN STATE PENITENTIARY

Arthur Reid, Lake Villa Box-Car Robber, Is Found Guilty

Facing the prospect of spending from one year to life in Joliet penitentiary, Arthur Reid, 41, whose police record and convictions date back to his boyhood, was found guilty of attempted burglary and larceny by a circuit court jury Tuesday night.

Attorney Kurt Kiesow, who defended him, made a motion for a new trial, but the date of the argument was not set by Circuit Court Judge Claire C. Edwards.

Reid was wounded in the Soo line yards at Lake Villa last fall by J. W. DeGon, a railroad detective. At the same time Arthur Denney, Reid's companion, was slain by the detective.

Reid, according to state witnesses, crawled to the side of the tracks and made his getaway in his car. He went as far as Deerfield where he asked two young men to aid him to a hospital. The convict was taken to Highland Park and Chief of Police Percy McLaughlin, of Deerfield, notified Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle of the fact that a wounded man had been taken to the hospital.

The sheriff immediately went to Reid and had him held as clues indicated that he was one of the thieves.

Says He'll Be Killed

Reid is positive that he will be slain.

"That sentence is as good as the electric chair for me. I was pardoned at Joliet in 1927 for telling Ward, an Elmer Green of a plot to dynamite the prison. When I get back there the fellows will certainly be hard on me. I'm as good as dead now," Reid declared.

His alibi at the trial was that he and Denney had started for a place near Sparta, Wis., to visit a relative of Denney. The car stalled, he testified, and the two of them went to the railroad tracks to catch a ride north. He said the detective met them and without warning, shot.

He did not stop for aid in Lake Villa, he pointed out, because he feared that he would be connected with the trouble in the railroad yards.

He admitted under the cross examination of State's Attorney A. V. Smith that he had gone under several aliases because he had escaped from the state prison in Michigan.

William Fairweather, a railroad detective wounded by Reid fifteen years ago, was one of the witnesses to appear against the convict who served time in the Wisconsin penitentiary for that offense.

HOME IS BACKBONE OF CIVILIZATION; FUNDAMENTAL ADVANCEMENTS HAVE MADE IT COMFORTABLE, CONVENIENT

Comparison of Home 50 Years Ago and Now, Amazing

ELECTRICITY PLAYS BIG PART

By Agnes Blenfang
Life is great, but progress is greater, because if it were not for that Eternal Sequence, animate existence would be impossible. Step by step, year by year, and decade by decade, every phase of our American life has undergone transformation — our industries, our schools, our political and financial institutions, but most important of all, our homes.

Home is basic institution. Home — that little Kingdom which has always been a cherished haven in our great nation, is a factory which turns out not concrete articles but human beings. It is the backbone of civilization and no fundamental advancement has ever come to pass which did not have its origin in the home. Most of us are intoxicated with amazement when we stop to think how much the American home of today differs from that of 50 or even 25 years ago. Comfort and convenience, due to the vision, energy and constructive ability of inventive geniuses, have swept to a mightier and mightier destiny each year. In that humble little domicile of our ancestors there was the parlor, which was open only for a wedding or funeral; the chunk stove; the wooden bench; the tallow candle; the wood on wash tub; the rag carpet; ugly crayon portraits leaning unchantly against the walls; tumbourines; "half-receivers"; jigsaw brackets; tawdry vases; grotesque, mechanical engravings; fatuous and un-aesthetic colorful calendars; and the old-fashioned organ — in fact everything that Greenwich Village might suggest. Today there is the expansive habitable living room, the gathering place of the family; the radiator or register; the luxuriously upholstered davenport; the floor lamp; the electric washing machine; the velvet rug; a portrait study of a beautiful sunset; the grand piano; the electric curling iron; the electric toaster; the electric stove; the electric dishwasher, which has eliminated the drudgery and diadema that was formerly associated with the plebeian task of washing dishes; the radio, which keeps the family in touch with current news as well as with the finer things of life; electric sweepers; electric dusters; running water; the bath tub; and the telephone.

Plan of Modern Home Better
No longer must the housewife and mother, the uncrowned queen of America, conform to the plan of a house as it is constructed by an architect who has no knowledge of a woman's needs in the performance of her household tasks — woman no longer has to abide by man's unhuman architecture, as it might well be termed. The old inconvenient pretentious homes have been replaced by convenient practical ones. Today, instead of the wash room, the kitchen, and the woodshed being the centers of interest, they are the balcony, the sunroom, and the lounge. Such are word pictures of the American home of yesterday and that of today, and from them the conclusion that electricity has performed a definite service in the creation of convenient, comfortable, and up-to-date homes may be readily drawn.

Countenance Proof of Change
The very comparison between the facial expression of the mother of half a century ago with that of the modern mother is tangible evidence that some transformation has taken place to make her work easier. The former had a pained and strained countenance, while the latter has one of relaxation, peacefulness, and happiness.

These amazing developments which have come to make the modern home more comfortable and convenient have been concomitant with the needs of the family as determined by the progress made in other phases of our civilization and no phases where are these decided and pleasant home developments more in evidence than they are right here in our own little "Garden of Eden", Antioch.

REPRESENTATIVE LYONS ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY FOR RE-NOMINATION

Fine First Term Record Will Help Mundelein Man at Primaries

SAYS 8TH DISTRICT IS SECOND TO NONE

Official announcement of the candidacy of Representative Richard J. Lyons for re-nomination from the eighth district was received yesterday by friends of the young assemblyman throughout the three counties of the district.

"My every ambition and effort, as a member of the Illinois General Assembly, from this district has been and will continue to be directed toward helping to make ours a greater and more important community," Rep. Lyons stated. My legislative record, I believe, will bear out this statement.

"Our district is unique in its importance, both politically and commercially. No district in the state has a more progressive type of citizenry and an atmosphere of social and economic importance radiates from our district that few political units of the country can boast. These facts, together with the advantage of our strategic location, convinces me that we are destined to become a center, second to but few, if any, communities in the United States. I sincerely trust that I may be given the opportunity to be of some assistance in our development."

As a first term at Springfield last year Rep. Lyons set up a very enviable record by being present and voting at every roll-call, and by being on the job every minute of the time during the sessions. It goes without saying that this record will prove to be of material aid to him in the forthcoming primary election.

DIAMOND JUBILEE OF MILLBURN MUTUAL INSURANCE CO. RECALLS HISTORY OF FOUNDING 75 YEARS AGO

Successful Company Is Owned and Controlled by Farmers

OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED AT ANNUAL MEETING

The 75th annual meeting of the Millburn Mutual Insurance company held at Millburn last Saturday, was occasion for celebration of the company's diamond jubilee and the recalling of events that resulted in the founding of the Lake county company three quarters of a century ago.

Re-election of all officers of the company occurred at the business session. Those included Leslie S. Bonner, president; J. S. Donnan, secretary, who was first elected to that office 14 years ago; and Carl Hughes, treasurer. Directors are John G. Wirtz, C. J. Wright and Frank Kennedy.

A banquet was served at noon by the ladies of Millburn.

Has Interesting History

The Millburn Mutual has an interesting history. It was more than 75 years ago that a house belonging to George Strang, Millburn, was burned to the ground, and it was found that the company in which he carried insurance was insolvent and the property was a total loss. This incident set the people thinking, and Father Dodge was the prime mover in forming the company that is now recognized as one of the strongest mutual companies in Illinois.

The first meeting was called to discuss Mutual Insurance on March 5th.

New Families Come To Antioch To Live

Two new families have established residential bonds in Antioch, the Thomas Ryans, who hail from Winthrop Harbor, Illinois, and the Clifford Olds, who formerly lived in Waukegan; the former have four children, two of whom are enrolled in the eighth grade, one in the sixth, and one in the fourth, while the latter have one child, who is in the first grade. Mr. Ryan, who is now working at the Johnson Motor plant in Waukegan, will soon be employed at the Antioch Machine and Tool Co. It is reported. Mr. Olds is also employed by that company. Both families live on Orchard street.

CHANGE LOCATION OF FEED SITE FOR TIFFANY DINNER

Banquet To Be Held at Masonic Dining Hall in Waukegan

Several days ago some of the friends of Chief of Police Lester Tiffany of Lake Forest, Republican candidate for sheriff of Lake county, conceived the idea of having a set together meeting by tendering a banquet in his honor on the night of January 16th, at the Karcher hotel in Waukegan. Tickets were issued for this banquet, but the demands for tickets came so fast that Tiffany's friends found there is no hotel in Waukegan or vicinity sufficiently large to accommodate the crowd desiring to attend.

However, Tiffany's friends were not to be outdone and proceeded at once to make more elaborate arrangements to have all the friends of the Lake Forest police chief and their friends partake of a good old fashioned turkey dinner at the Masonic dining room, tonight. Dinner is to be served from six to eight p. m. By making this change none of the friends and supporters of Mr. Tiffany will be disappointed. It was decided to serve the dinner for a two hour period so as to take care of those coming from all parts of the county. The committee in charge report that splendid entertainment will be provided and that there will not be a dull moment during the evening.

KUTIL, STUDENTS TRY TO PLACE DAIRYING ON ADVANCED BASIS

Buy Well-Bred Calves From Strains of Best Stock

In an effort to place the dairy industry of the community on a more efficient basis by the introduction of well-bred calves from strains of high production cattle, C. L. Kutil, instructor of vocational agriculture at the high school, and members of the Antioch chapter of the Future Farmers recently drove over a thousand miles in two states looking for calves whose ancestors had excellent performance records.

Select From Far and Near

Ten of these calves are animals selected from the good herds of this community, while the others have been brought in from the outside. Four Holstein, 3 Guernsey, and 3 Brown Swiss calves are the new ones added. Norman Barthel of Salem purchased 2 Holstein heifers at Whitewater, Wis.; Clarence Galtier of Lake Villa bought a Brown Swiss calf near Waukegan, Wis.; Roland Glassman of Antioch and Harold Sheen, Salem, recently secured several Brown Swiss heifers from the Grant McCormick farm at Pontiac, Ill.; Kenneth Denman, Millburn, bought a Holstein from Gea. White, Antioch; Robert Hughes got a Holstein from Mr. Elsbury, near Waukegan; Lloyd Barnstable bought 2 Guernsey calves in McHenry county; and Lloyd Atwell, Lake Villa, got his Guernsey heifer in Racine county. The total cost of these 10 calves was $700. Thus when Antioch Future Farmers are asked to lead their pure bred dairy calves into the judging ring at the Lake County 4-H club roundup next August, approximately 20 heifer calves will be exhibited.

Other Clubs To Be Started

In addition to the dairy calf clubs, the local organization will also sponsor poultry, pig, sheep, and corn clubs this year. C. L. Kutil, who was the first to introduce 4-H club work in Antioch 7 years ago, and who has conducted the work each year since, will act as leader again in 1930. He will be assisted by a number of his former students.

Main Purpose Not Material

The main purpose of 4-H club work is not to build up flocks and herds materially, but to enable the boys and girls of the country to pledge their heads to clearer thinking; their hearts to greater loyalty; their hands to longer service. The combined membership of 4-H clubs in the United States has nearly reached the million mark.

T. J. STAHL WINS LAWSUIT AGAINST WILBUR VOLIVA

Real Estate Dealer Granted $5,000.00 For Com- missions

Following 20 minutes of deliberation, a Circuit court jury declared T. J. Stahl, Antioch and Waukegan real estate dealer, victorious in a two-day court fight against Wilbur Glenn Voliva for $5,000 in commission on a real estate sale, Monday afternoon.

The defense, seeking to prove that Stahl was unauthorized as an agent for Voliva's property, produced only two witnesses, Voliva himself not appearing in court. Stahl contended that he had entered into an oral contract with Clifford Leach, Voliva's agent, which granted him 6 per cent commission for the sale of a 300-acre parcel of land in western Zion. The defense stated that Voliva had no knowledge of the contract and hence was not bound by it.

Stahl showed that he had sold the land to Mrs. Julia M. Baker of Chicago for $109,000.

A motion for a new trial will be heard by Judge Claire C. Edwards on a later date.

ANTIOCH PEOPLE OF TODAY NOT "HOLED UP"

A great many Antioch citizens no doubt can easily remember the time when the coming of winter meant the end of virtually all outdoor activity. Carpenters and bricklayers laid aside their tools and sat back to await the coming of spring. Everybody was practically "holed up" for the winter.

Even a quarter of a century ago there was no construction work; concrete was not poured, because it would freeze; the auto was jacked up and tires and batteries removed—and the family settled down for the winter.

Today there is no such thing as a closed season for almost any trade. There is always something to be done and willing workers ready to do it. Making a living is now a 52-week job every year and is not crowded into a few months of any particular season.

This speaks volumes for improved methods and especially for our ability to invent machines that do not have to have certain weather conditions in order to function. It makes life far easier too, when men do not have to remain idle during the cold months simply because the weather is not to their liking. Few men enjoy loafing. The average man is glad he can have a job he can work at regularly in winter the same as in the warmer seasons. The passing of the old custom of "holing up" for the winter and barely existing until spring returned has been worth a lot to the country as a whole.

CAN A MAN BE TOO HONEST?

Two men were engaged in a conversation regarding a friend who had virtually failed in business. During this conversation one made the statement concerning the friend: "The trouble with so and so is that he is too honest". Now just what did the gentleman in question mean by being "too honest?" Is it true that honesty is a matter of degree, that is, that one can be honest, more honest, and most honest? Or, to go in the opposite direction, one may be honest, less honest, and least honest? Or, is it just that one is either honest or dishonest?

Honesty, every one knows, is the best policy. It avoids the penalties of the law. It always pays in the long run. There may be circumstances in which dishonesty might reap greater material rewards. But dishonesty never pays a dividend which satisfies a man's conscience. The world will make a beaten path to the door of the man who is absolutely trustworthy in preference to the one who has a question mark about his character? No one, but a moral imbecile, is proud of admitting to the public that there is a shadow over his character. No one, but a moral imbecile, is proud of any degree of dishonesty. This being true is an admission on our part that we have no tolerance for dishonesty, and that as a policy it is frowned upon.

EXAGGERATED WORDS

You have, no doubt, often heard it said that one has to divide by two what a certain fellow says in order to arrive at the truth. Each of us, before he passes on a bit of information should stop to consider whether or not there is any stock in it.

The business of putting on means to the religious person, gossip and to the neighbor fence talk, but to the fellow who says little and thinks a lot, it means a cheap way in which false notoriety and favor may be gained.

Of course the more awful or scandalous the corn the greater is the multiplicity by which the truth is really multiplied when YOU finally hear it.

Just for the sake of experiment take a bit of scandal and turn it loose in our own little city. Two days later when you go around and listen, you will hear plenty of talk. As you listen in you will no doubt find the conclusion to be very interesting. No two stories will fit. Instead each will have an added feature. For instance on the first day after a certain accident has occurred you will hear that the car, which was tipped over, was damaged somewhat and the man involved only a good shaking up. On the second day you will hear that the car was a complete wreck and that the poor man lay in some hospital in an unconscious state. On the third day you will hear that the car was damaged beyond repair and that the victim is not expected to live. Well, here is the truth—the car skidded off the road; this resulted in a blow-out and a broken windshield from which the driver received a few scratches on his forehead.

Moral: THINK BEFORE YOU SPEAK.

The Embarrassment of Riches

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

The impression which one gets of Hawaii, almost before the boat has decked at Honolulu, is that it is a garden of flowers. Friends come running up the ship's gangplank with wreaths of carnations and gardenias, and fragrant ginger and roses and throw them around one's neck even before one has landed. Our eyes are blinded almost as we drive down the street with the brilliance of the coloring. Croton hedges which seem unreal, painted, so bright a scarlet are they. Long rows of shower trees, line the street covered with flowers—scarlet, yellow, pink and a combination of rainbow which make one think he is in fairy land. Great masses of hibiscus are everywhere showing a thousand tints and colors and combination of colors. I had never before seen such a variety of flowers and such a riot of color. And the sky was blue with soft white clouds, drifting lazily across it, and the air was only mildly warm, and out there was the ocean glistening in the sun and showing every opalescent tint that imagination could conceive of. It seemed an ideal place to live—flowers everywhere and a blue sky and sunshine and the air filled with a thousand sweet odors.

In the morning I was awakened by a regular scratching sound outside my bungalow. I looked out of the window and saw Suki sweeping the lawn with a long handled, rattan broom. A half dozen huge banana trees stood back of the hotel, yellow with big bell-like blossoms. In the daytime during the night the flowers had faded and dropped, and the ground underneath the trees was littered with them. So, too, with the brilliant hibiscus; and under the red shower trees there was a carpet of faded petals. Suki was raking them into piles and carrying them away and burning them. Even flowers, it seems, involve labor and responsibility, and are not an unmixed delight. There is an embarrassment in a riches of flowers as I suppose there is in every sort of riches.

A woman to San Francisco has just applied for a divorce. She was married to a man who after their marriage had become suddenly rich through the discovery of oil on some of his property. The luxury amid which the woman suddenly found herself was an embarrassment to her; she longed for the old simple life.

"Poverty grants to those she loves," she wrote to her husband, "the only urge of life—the boon of desire." With nothing to wish for, nothing to work for; with every want satisfied, life would no doubt pall upon us. We can have too many flowers, too much sunshine. For even flowers and sunshine might in time become a real embarrassment of riches.

"I sometimes long to be a poor man's wife," a wealthy woman once said to me. "There would be less responsibility for me in such a position, more freedom, more joy in which I could look forward."

Old Eagle Eye Says--

A real two-act drama was enacted at the intersection of Main and Orchard streets Friday afternoon. Act I: A car stopped; a woman at the wheel; door open; another member of the fair sex approaching the machine; a big black dog going toward the one about to step into the car; dog gets a hard swift kick; woman jumps into the machine; the two start on their way. Act II: Dog yelps; Marshal Simonsen takes pity on him and invites him to come across the street; dog accepts invitation with alacrity; Bow Wow Canidae, is petted. The drama closes when the dog bounces happily down the street with nothing but kind thoughts of the one who proved himself to be a friend of dumb animals.

From a newspaper's point of view the New Year has one great virtue—the holidays fall on Thursday. It will be a simple matter to get out the sheet the afternoon before and enter the big days with no hang over of responsibility.

What are you going to do with some of the scraps left over from that dinner you had yesterday? Probably you saved them temporarily but may eventually wrap them in a newspaper and chuck them in the furnace. Don't do it. Spread them on the snow in the back yard and give the birds a chance. You will be amazed at what and how much they will eat.

Mussolini's slogan, "Live dangerously," ought to be an immense stimulus to those of us who are caught in a self-satisfied rut, but it is not wholly satisfactory, perhaps, because it implies that egotistic climbing at another's expense. Old Eagle Eye likes better the statement attributed to the Dean and Chapter of Seville who are supposed to have said, when considering the construction of Seville cathedral: "Let us build us such a church that those who come after us may think us mad for having attempted it." What an aim! If we were all to strive to live so "that those who come after us would think us mad for having attempted it," the millennium might be much nearer. Amen!

Friday ought to be a big day down here at the News office—it's Benjamin's birthday.

Harnessing Our Habits

Industry is intelligent action, motion, movement. And now science tells us that thought is a physical action, a movement, a vibration of the cells of the brain.

The joy and satisfaction of successful effort—overcoming obstacles, getting lessons, mastering details which we once thought difficult—evolves into a habit, and gives Concentration. Industry and Concentration and Self-Confidence spell Mastery.

Industry is a habit.

So we get the formula: Acquire physical and mental industry by doing certain things at certain hours, tearing the effort before it becomes wearisome. In mental work keep in touch with people who are a little beyond you.—Elbert Hubbard.

HintsHere's How You Can Make Your Living
Room Larger

Is your living room small? Does it look small? Do you want to make it more expansive? Well, here's the way.

If you will make your walls light and plain and your woodwork just a little darker than the walls, you will find that the apparent size of the room is increased. Avoid large figures in wall paper, rugs, or in any large piece of furniture. Limit the pieces of furniture in the room to a very few, thus relieving the crowded feeling. Arrange the furniture in attractive groups and have only a few centers of interest. Place a small number of pictures on the wall and avoid large hangings. If you keep the drapes at the windows rather plain and inconspicuous and use small things such as pillows, lamps, books, vases, pictures, etc., attractively arranged table or desk tops to introduce your decorative effects, the room will appear much larger. Warm colors, such as red and orange, used in large quantities, will make the room appear smaller, while cool colors, such as dull shades of any color, grey, blue or green, will have the opposite effect.

Disappointment

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois

It is not a good thing always to succeed, and though the proverb is that "nothing succeeds like success," there are times when success makes us careless, overconfident, so sure that nothing can happen to interfere with our reaching the goal toward which we are headed, that we grow careless and indifferent, and though failure often discourages and success elates, yet there are times when it takes the shock of failure or disappointment to give the discipline upon which success is dependent, or which brings out the best in us.

Cotton has never had the discipline of disappointment. His lines have fallen in very pleasant places. He has had all his life whatever money can buy, whatever social and financial prominence can furnish. So far as the ordinary affairs of life are concerned he has never been disappointed. All he has had to do is to ask for whatever he wanted, to stretch out his hand, so to speak, and it was his. He has no understanding of people who have met misfortune, no sympathy for those who meet one reverse after another. He is selfish, a miserably glib, a self-satisfied and rather arrogant citizen. The discipline of disappointment would have softened him, no doubt, and have made him more human in his sympathies.

Davis had always played baseball well from the time that he was old enough to get out in the back lot with the older fellows and bat a ball around until he tried out for the college nine. He had always made good at his favorite game and had been captain of the team on which he played from the time he entered grade school until he got out of high school. Disappointment had never come his way when he was trying out for baseball. He was quite sure now of a place on the college nine, and he saw no particular reason why he should exert himself with any particular energy. The berth was going to be his, and he was sure of it. The names of those who were to stay on the squad were to be posted in the afternoon and Davis wandered over to see who his teammates were to be. But his own name was not there. A little insignificant country boy by the name of Jones had the position which he had expected to fill. It was the first disappointment the boy had ever experienced and he felt it keenly.

Then he began to take stock of himself, and as he sat despondent with his head on his hand, it all came over him that he had been too cocky, too conceited, too sure of himself. He had really not made the effort that he could have made, that he was, in fact, under every obligation to make. Disappointment was really coming to him. It was a good lesson for him. The next time he got into the pitcher's box, he did not swagger quite so much; he was more modest, more deliberate, and more accurate. The discipline of disappointment had taught him more self-control.

Do You Know How To Stop Your Cake
From Falling

Does your angel food cake fall?

There are several reasons for this. The difficulty probably lies in the temperature of your oven. If the oven is too hot, the cake will brown over the top before the inside is thoroughly cooked. Then the air bubbles in the center will break, letting the semi-liquid batter down. If the oven is too cold, the cake will rise very high, and then because there has not been enough heat to stiffen it while it rises, or to form a crust over the top, the air will escape and the cake will sink. If you have no regulator on your stove, a good rule to follow is to put the cake in a rather cool oven, and if it has not started to brown at the end of 25 minutes, increase the heat a little.

Hints For Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

A GOOD way to avoid the rings and marks which a hammer often leaves on woodwork or other painted surfaces, is to cover the head of the hammer with a piece of soft, thick cloth.

A salad dressing that is especially good on cabbage or fresh salad greens, can be made in almost no time at all by blending powdered sugar in sour cream, with vinegar added to taste.

To separate two glasses that have stuck together, put cold water in the inner one, and hold the outer one in warm water.

NORTH SHORE LINE KEEPS EMPLOYEES
PHYSICALLY FIT; AVERAGE SPAN OF LIFE IS FIFTY-SIX YEARS

"Hospitals on wheels" maintained treatments of ailments at their inception are shown in figures compiled by the Medical Department of the Chicago North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad—North Shore Line—are used in keeping employees of the "Road of Service" in good physical condition. As a result of the high physical standards, maintained, employees of the North Shore Line comprise one of the healthiest industrial groups in the world, according to Dr. Hart E. Fisher, Chief Surgeon.

"The average span of life among employees on the North Shore Line is 56 years, while public health figures place the general average at less than 44 years," said Dr. Fisher. "Only eleven out of an average of 2,016 employees on the North Shore Line died during 1928."

In addition to the rigid physical requirements for employment, the Medical Department conducts periodic re-examinations of all employees to detect and remedy physical defects before they become serious. Dr. Fisher pointed out. The "hospitals on wheels" are used in making these frequent re-examinations. A medical car is used to examine employees at points along the line where they may be reached on the job. A motor coach, completely equipped with all medical apparatus required for making the examinations, is operated to points where track facilities are not available.

The effective results obtained from the periodical re-examinations and treatments of ailments at their inception are shown in figures compiled by Dr. Fisher on the basis of checks made in the travelling hospitals during a six-month period recently. Of 991 employees examined, 756 were found to be physically normal. Among the remaining 235 employees, 33 were wearing glasses but were otherwise normal, 128 were restored to normal with treatment while working, 39 were improved without absence from their jobs, 27 were found to have defects that could not be cured but did not prevent them from working and only eight were relieved from duty for treatment as physically unfit.

"We are certain that the premier standing of the North Shore Line in the electric transportation industry is in large measure attributed to the healthy condition of our employees," said Dr. Fisher. "A healthy employee is an asset to the public as well as to our company. In maintaining the efficiency of its personnel the North Shore Line is working for the best interests of its customers by insuring them the best of service at all times."

The pictures give exterior and interior views of the motor coach "hospital on wheels," which recently operated to many points along the North Shore Line. In the bottom picture Dr. Franklin Blye and Nurse Lita Crowley of the Medical Department are seen examining a "Road of Service" employee.

Millburn Mutual Is 75 Year Old Company

1855, the bounds of the company were extended to Antioch, Newport, Avon, and Warren, with the exception of the incorporations of Antioch and Hainesville.

The third extension was at the annual meeting on June 1, 1861. This extension added the town of Goodale or Goodel. In looking up the history of the county, we find that Grant township was formerly called Goodale. This was named after a man named Goodale, who promised to give a site for a town hall. This he never did, and a few years afterwards he moved entirely out of the county. In 1867 the name of the township was changed to Grant, in honor of General U. S. Grant.

The fourth extension of territory of the Millburn Insurance company was made on June 3rd, 1865, at the annual meeting of the company, when the bounds were extended to coincide with the County lines, except in incorporated villages and towns.

The charter was received on February 16, 1865, and was signed by Governor R. I. Oglesby, Allen C. Fuller, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and William Broes, Speaker of the Senate.

The first printed policy was issued on August 1, 1865, to G. P. Rose in Warren, for a coverage of $850.00. This property is located where Elmer Rose now lives. The policy was signed by R. W. Minto, Secretary and H. Whitney, President. Henry W. Boyce was the agent. The limit for one risk at that time was $1,200.00 and the buildings had to be within 50 feet of each other. The limit today is $15,000.00 to one risk and the buildings can be 100 feet apart.

On December 10th, 1870, it was voted to hold all annual meetings at Millburn on the first Saturday after the first Monday in January of each year.

During this early period the officers and directors were allowed two dollars per day. On January 8th, 1876, it was voted to allow the officers $1.00 extra when necessary to use a horse and buggy.

The company has six and one-half million dollars worth of insurance in force with about eighteen hundred policy holders.

The Millburn Mutual Insurance company never has had a law suit.

All losses have always been settled satisfactorily and promptly.

On January 9, 1922, John Thain was elected secretary and served for 24 years, or until 1916. In 1922 he was elected president and served until his death in March 1928. Mr. Thain gave over thirty years of his life in serving his company. After his death Leslie Bonner was elected president and is still serving in that capacity.

After Mr. Thain had served twenty-four years as secretary, J. S. Deunman was elected secretary in 1916 and he has served continuously since then.

It might be interesting to know who has served as officers for the last twenty-five years:

Presidents

1903 to 1906, Wm. J. White.
1906 to 1911, Geo. H. Kennedy.
1911 to 1916, John Bonner.
1916 to 1922, Geo. B. Stephens.
1922 to 1928, John A. Thain.
1928 to present time, Leslie S. Bonner.

Secretaries

1892 to 1916, John A. Thain.
1916 to present time, J. S. Deunman.

Treasurers

1903 to 1907, R. L. Strang.
1907 to 1910, James H. Bonner.
1910 to 1912, L. S. Bonner.
1912 to 1916, H. H. Grimm.
1916 to 1920, Harold Minto.
1920 to 1925, C. J. Wright.
1925 to 1928, J. S. Deunman.
1928 to present, Carl Hughes.

Directors From 1905 to Present Time
John Pollock, David White, George Edwards, David Pullen, George Kappla, L. W. Wakarfield, John McClure, W. F. Clow, Geo. McCullough, F. G. Wirtz, Ernest Davis, C. J. Wright, Frank Kennedy.

Some of the agents who have served during the later years are: T. A. Hoffman was appointed agent on January 17, 1890, and was agent for 26 years; when he died, Charles F. Richards was appointed agent in January 1908 and has been agent up to the present time, covering a period of twenty-two years. John E. Ballar was agent in 1884 and was agent until 1920, over a period of thirty-six years. James A. Bonner succeeded T. A. Hoffman as agent for Warren and Waukegan. L. G. Lobdell was agent for two years.

The present agents are: Arthur Leug, who has Grant, Avon, Warren, Waukegan, Benton, Newport and Lake Villa townships. George M.

Trout has Fremont, Libertyville and Elia townships. Arthur Powers has Wauconda and Cuba townships. W. L. Woodin has Vernon and Deerfield townships.

The Millburn Insurance company is one of the strongest Mutual Insurance companies in the State of Illinois. This has been accomplished through the able and honest leadership of the men who had its guidance in their hands and the true and loyal support of its members.

It has often been said that farmers cannot stick together in any co-operative movement. This organization spoke for itself, when it gathered together last Saturday and celebrated the 75th year of this great organization, owned and controlled by farmers.

EX-SERVICE MAN TALKS ON GERMANY; DRAWS COMPARISON

Hans Von Holdwede Tells About Many Phases
Of German Life

WAR CHANGES CONDITIONS

Information concerning the comparison of the conditions existing in Germany today with those which prevailed there prior to the World War such as never could be so effectively learned through the medium of the textbook was given Antioch High school students and teachers when they were addressed by Hans Von Holdwede, an ex-service man who spent the first 25 years of his life in that country, Monday afternoon.

Emphasizing the effect that war had on the naval power of Germany, the speaker said that preceding it she had innumerable ships, while following it she didn't own a single one which could be sailed on a body of water larger than Fox Lake.

From 1914 to 1923 there was practically no construction carried on and the mark had dropped so much in value that it took thousands to buy even a pound of butter. As soon as the laboring man got his check, he immediately went to the bank to get it cashed for fear that he might lose it if he kept longer. Hans told the story of one woman who, through force of habit, said she was about a thousand years when asked how old she was.

Over Emphasizing Athletics Influenced by the American and English athletic enthusiasm, Germany is now building gymnasium after gymnasium and is also teaching her young people the running games such as we have in our own country. Due to the fact that Germany today is poor financially these buildings are all being paid for with American money; almost every little town has taken out a bond issue for the purpose of improving its physical education status. When asked what kind of sports are provided for women, he replied that the only exercise they get is washing dishes, scrubbing floors, and performing other household duties.

School System Interesting During the spring, summer, and fall, school starts at 7 in the morning and closes at 5 at night, and in the winter time it begins one hour later in the morning. Pupils and students there do not have the opportunity to enjoy a summer vacation; they do, however, have a short period of leisure at the time of each holiday. Girls seldom go to school after they have finished the eighth grade and if they do they usually enroll in a home economics institution with the thought of training themselves to be efficient homemakers. A plan of procedure known as the Stipendium system is in operation in all the schools of Germany. Beginning with the eighth grade and continuing through high school, normal school, and university, 15 of the best students from the standpoint of scholarship are selected and given a sum of money (stipendium) with which to further their education in whatever field they have proved themselves to be most capable. This fund is provided by the government. Almost every child even though he be only 6 years old knows what his life work is going to be by the fact that his teachers have already discovered what occupation he is best fitted for. The tendency there is for the child to follow in the footsteps of his father.

Germany Thickly Populated Germany is much more thickly populated than is this country, it being very unusual for cities to be more than 3 miles apart. The streets are very winding and even for a person who has lived there all his life it would be an extremely difficult task to locate a certain family in a section of the city with which he was not thoroughly familiar were he given only the house number as a guide. Many of the magnificent old castles that were built there by the Romans are still in existence.

German Girl Differs from American The German girl is much different from the American one in a number of ways. When the former comes to our country she very quickly adopts our way of living, while when the American girl goes over to Germany, their customs do not appeal to her and she probably never adopts them. According to Hans, girls here do not appreciate the fine clothes they have to wear. He says if a German girl gets a new dress once a year she considers herself mighty lucky and if she is fortunate enough to own a dozen pair of woolen stockings, she will still have at least one of those pairs when she will have reached the age of 60. Ultra economy!

Germans Work Hard, Steadily Due to the fact that the Germans work extremely hard and almost constantly, Hans is of the opinion that they might progress even faster than American, had they the opportunity that citizens of our country have.

Upon arriving in Chicago for the

Pure Milk Association District Meetings Board of Director to be Elected

TOP ROW: W. C. McQueen, President; A. M. Kahl, Publicity. FRONT ROW: K. M. Royer, Laboratory Chief; D. N. Geyer, Manager.

3,500,000 Pounds of Milk Sold Chicago Market Daily

Mr. D. N. Geyer, manager of the Pure Milk Association will attend the district meetings to tell the story of the price conference at which $33,981,000.00 worth of milk was sold for the 17,564 dairymen supplying the Chicago market. Only after six days of sharp bargaining could any kind of an agreement be reached and then it has taken nearly thirty days since then to work out the details. But every member is assured of a market for his milk for 1930, regardless of how much milk he produces. The story of this sale of three and a half million pounds of milk every day throughout the year is so fascinating that every dairyman in the district will want to hear it.

Mr. K. M. Royer, manager of the Laboratory Field Service Department will address the meeting and show some of the results of the check-eting throughout the district. The Lake county meeting is to be held at Grayslake Jan. 21, at 7:00 o'clock; and the Kenosha county meeting will be held at Bristol, January 22, at one o'clock.

Practically 250 plants have been visited by the 11 field men during this past year. The results have been most gratifying and have gained thousands of dollars in the pockets of the local dairymen.

Mr. A. M. Kahl, editor of "Pure Milk" who always has something of interest to say will be present and tell the needs of education for quality production within the membership of the Association and the need of educating the public for increased consumption to take up the surplus which is now found on the market.

The business session will be confined to the election of district officers, especially that of director. Other matters to be considered will be the amendment to the by-laws passing on increased check-off which if granted will permit the Association to render greater service to the membership.

agreement with the Chicago Milk Dealers. Another meeting with the same dealers is close at hand and in order that this price committee can be of best service to the association, it is absolutely necessary that all members have reliable information on the conditions of dairy markets as they are today.

A capacity crowd is expected at this meeting. Already, Lake Zurich, probably the most enthusiastic and energetic group of co-operators in the county, are planning on over-half their members attending. They will be of great value indeed, for if other groups in the county would learn to march and work together like Lake Zurich, things would be ideal. May be a little Lake Zurich music will help.

One or two other men who are very prominent in the agricultural and business circles of Chicago may be present.

H. C. Glickerson, Lake County Farm Adviser, is attending Farmers' Week and the Farm Advisers' Conference at Champaign, January 13th to 17th.

The Annual Meeting of the Lake County Farm Bureau will be held at Grayslake on Friday, January 24th.

Dr. Burlington of the College of Agriculture, Urbana, Illinois, and Mr. R. M. Lohdell, County Superintendent of Highways, will be the principal speakers.

GLORIOUS HEALTH TAKES PLACE OF LONG SUFFERING

Stomach Trouble and Neuritis Yield Quickly To Master Medicine; All Else Failed

MRS. MINNIE JONES

"I was miserable and unhappy with different chronic ailments and then Konjola made a wonderful change", said Mrs. Minnie Jones, 1321 Forrest Hill street, Peoria. "For several years my stomach had given me trouble. After every meal gas formed. My heart beat wildly and I choked and gasped for air. Often I belched up particles of food. About eighteen months ago a severe case of neuritis developed, and anyone who has known the pangs of this disease can understand what I went through. "Numerous friends recommended Konjola to me and I determined, finally, to find out what it would do. It did not take long for me to realize that I was on the right track. Soon my food began digesting better and as I continued all signs of stomach trouble vanished. Soon the neuritis pains eased up. All my ailments vanished and glorious health took the place of pain and suffering. Konjola is sold in Antioch at S. H. Reeves' drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Branded by Turks

Albert Nye Houghton, fifty-four, an American citizen, who is now in Washington, exhibiting the scars inflicted on his face and body during the two years he spent in a Turkish prison, Houghton, who seeks a pension on which he may live, was a Spanish-American war veteran who was engaged in 1914-15 in running the blockade into Mesopotamia aboard a British ship. He was captured, branded as a spy and sent to prison in the Blue mountains. There he was branded with the German double-headed eagle superimposed on the Turkish "Spider of Death," which served as a means of identification in case of escape. Escaping from prison with a young girl, Ada Allen Mace, another prisoner, Houghton later joined the expedition of Lord Curzon which unearthed the tomb of King Tut-Ank-Amen.

EVERYBODY DOES IT

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Whether heredity or environment plays the greater part in the development of our characters and our habits is possibly still a matter of difference of opinion. There is much to be said upon either side, but there is no doubt that what others about us are doing in a large measure determines our own procedure, and often to a much greater extent than it should. We constantly hear the excuse in justification of an irregular or illegal procedure, "Well, everybody does it,"—an excuse which sometimes seems almost an adequate justification of murder.

Gordon had all his life been quite exemplary in his conduct until the Volstead act was passed. Alcohol was something which he had given no consideration. I suspect that neither he nor his wife had ever tasted liquor of any sort. It is quite different now. There is a handsome silver cocktail shaker upon the Gordon sideboard and liquor on the shelves below. Whenever the Gordons have guests the bottles are brought out and good cheer is stimulated. Similar practices are followed when the Gordons call upon their friends.

"I never touched a drop until I was thirty," Gordon said to me not long ago. "I know it isn't good for me now, but one cannot go out these days among one's friends without being offered a drink and what is one to say? Everybody's doing it."

Of course I could have suggested that he decline to take liquor as he might pass up a very good piece at a dinner party if it happened to be served, but I know that such a procedure would embarrass him, and so refrained from giving him advice.

Mrs. Crawford's sixteen-year-old daughter, who is not robust at best, was looking pretty pale and hollow-eyed when Nancy and I were calling on the family a few evenings ago.

"Isn't Stella well?" I inquired, really concerned as to her condition.

"Well, she isn't at all strong," Mrs. Crawford explained, "but the real trouble is she doesn't get rest and sleep enough, and she is tired out all the time."

"Why?" I asked. I knew the Crawfords had servants enough so that Stella was not worn out from carrying the burden of household duties, and high school work never wears anyone out.

"She is out late at some sort of social affair two or three times a week. There are dances and theater parties and automobile rides. She never gets to bed until after midnight."

"But why do you let her?" I asked innocently. I have never had a daughter, and supposed that parents still have some control of their children.

"Oh, everybody's doing it these days, and one cannot peacefully keep one's children from doing what all the neighbors' children are doing."

"I suppose so," I answered, "not even if it kills them to keep up with the crowd."

It was the same explanation I got from Simmons when I talked to him about a violation of college regulation which involved actual dishonesty.

"Oh, I know it's wrong," he said, "but everybody's doing it."

And that's that.

WILMOT PIRATES DEFEAT KENOSHA TEAM BY 34-33

Parent-Teachers Are Sponsoring Card Party at Gymnasium

The Pirates defeated the Grant Furniture Basketball team, City League leaders from Kenosha, 34-23 at the Wilmot gym Sunday afternoon. The first quarter resulted in a tie of 6 to 6; the Pirates led by a point, 15-14 at the half and the third quarter found the Grant Furniture's slant in the last three minutes of play and brought the opposing team to defeat.

In the Kenosha team Cooper was

The boys played as a team with no outstanding star. The high scorer was Gillmore with five baskets and Bernhoff following close with four.

There are no games scheduled for this week, but the team goes to Palmyra to play that team, January 24th. On January 25th it goes to Kenosha to meet the Kenosha Vocationals.

The 4-11 Club Achievement night for the Western part of Kenosha county was held Tuesday night. The Blue Ribbon club received 25 pins in recognition of their work of the past year. Claudia Vincent and John Memler received honor pins from the state for their outstanding work.

Antioch Players Hand
Gurnee Fellows Defeat
In Score of 31-2

Taking advantage of the opportunity to secure revenge for the two defeats handed them last year, Antioch majors trimmed Gurnee by a score of 31-2 Friday night at Gurnee.

Local guards managed to keep their opponents from making any field goals, two points being made by free throws. The local fellows had possession of the ball the greatest share of the time, the fast breaking offense having the Gurnee team complete the battle. The Antioch Minors won over their competitors by a 26-9 count. The Gurnee boys, who are new at the game, should be able to put up a much better fight when they come here some time about the middle of February.

The most crucial game of the season as far as Antioch is concerned will be played here Friday evening with Barrington, who has the honor of having won from Libertyville, who in turn defeated Antioch. One of the features of that game will be drills by local boy scouts put on between halves.

On Saturday night the boys will make a trip to Franklin Park, where they will try to get revenge for the defeat administered them in football. It is claimed that Franklin Park has a very fast aggregation, it being about the size of Antioch's group. As an added feature this game should give something of an indication of the outcome of some of the tournament games, since Antioch should meet Barrington in the semi-finals. As a further added interest this is the first time in two years that Barrington has played Antioch.

The ag boys had a party at the high school gym Saturday night. Games were played and refreshments served.

Members of the fifth grade did some sculpture work with snow Monday.

The attendance at the grade school has been almost 100% this week.

INVESTIGATION IS BEING LAUNCHED
INTO SHOOTING

man then came in and ordered them to pipe down, resulting in an argument among the three.

Herbert Bergman, waiter at the restaurant, ordered all three to leave the place and finish the argument outside. In a moment after they had walked out several shots were fired. Ludlow stepped back into the restaurant and called the police, reporting that his friend, Douglas Steuber had been killed by the unknown assailant. When police arrived, they found the body lying in the snow in the middle of the street.

Had Been Drinking

Ludlow said that the man who did the shooting had been drinking and that he started the argument. He said that when they got out of the restaurant, they had quieted the man and he had started north on Jefferson avenue while they were returning to Steuber's Chevrolet car which was parked on Washington street. Ludlow said that when the man was half a block away from them, he turned and fired two shots and Steuber dropped dead. Ludlow started to run but dropped to the snow when a shot whistled over his head.

From a description given by Ludlow, Bergman, the waiter, J. Casey, of 312 Julian street, ticket agent at the North Shore station, and a man named Warner, a baggage man at the station, police pictured Klarkowski and went to his home at 1531 Monroe street. The place was lighted up and they entered.

Told Wife of Shooting

Mrs. Klarkowski led them to the bedroom where the deputy sheriff lay on the bed. She said he had come home and told her that he had just shot a man, and then went to bed. Lieutenant Hicks found his gun, with shots fired, under his overcoat on the davenport, and Ludlow, who had been taken with the police, identified him as the man who had done the shooting. Klarkowski was taken to the city jail where he is said to have admitted the shooting.

After she had been told by her husband that he had shot a man, Mrs. Klarkowski called Sheriff Doolittle, who arrived just as the police were leaving with their prisoner. The sheriff went to the police station with them and Chief Kennedy turned Klarkowski over to Doolittle. Klarkowski was locked up at the county jail and Ludlow was held until Tuesday morning as a witness. He was released before noon.

Attorney William R. Behanna has been retained by the Klarkowski family to defend the deputy sheriff, and stated Tuesday morning that Klarkowski had said that he went in to the restaurant to get a sandwich for his wife and that two men, both of whom had been drinking, were causing a disturbance. He told his attorney that he had warned them to be quiet and had told them he was an officer. Klarkowski maintains that they started an argument and that when he left the restaurant that they followed and that he was running north on Jefferson avenue with the two chasing him. He said one of them had told the other to "kill him" and that he turned and fired.

A question of great importance to the defense of Klarkowski arose yesterday when Coroner John L. Taylor traced the course of the fatal bullet through the body of Douglas Steuber. In an autopsy held at the Wetzel and Peterson morgue.

According to the coroner's findings the bullet took a sharp downward course, tipping the lower part of the left lung and passing through the heart and stomach, and thence out of the body through the back. The indications are that Steuber was either leaning sharply forward or squatting in an attitude of attack. Sheriff Doolittle is conducting a brisk investigation in an effort to uncover evidence which might mitigate Klarkowski's deed.

Antioch Men Attend

The Antioch men were invited guests of the Public Service company. The Chicago chamber of commerce vice club and other representatives were present, and the main speaker of the evening was the president of the U. S. chamber of commerce. The theme of his address was co-operation, and he emphasized the fact that the business that hoped to rise from the wreckage of so-called competitors was doomed to failure.

John Brogan, Robert King, Harold Hoffman, Clayton O'Haver, Allan Bock, Dorre Cremin, Roy McNeill, Chas. Florio, Harold Kennedy, Gordon Martin, Howard Mastne, Coach G. G. Reed, and Prin. L. O. Bright attended Northwestern-Purdue game at Evanston Monday night.

HOME—

The people in a progressive, healthy and happy community must, above all things, be well housed.

The kind of houses in which we live and the shape in which we keep them tell what kind of a people we are.

Your residence—where you live—is one of the most important facts about you. Truly, "as your house, so are you."

Homes cover a wide range of individual wealth and taste.

They are an evidence of both.

A home should be the best a family can possibly afford.

The interior of the home is as important as the exterior. Authorities tell us that the minimum standard for each house is:

- 1—At least one room per person
- 2—No dark rooms.
- 3—A heating system.
- 4—A lighting system.
- 5—Hot and cold running water.
- 6—Toilet and bath.
- 7—Screens.

The art of good housekeeping is today far more simple than ever before. From back door to front, from roof to cellar, there are available modern labor-saving and comfort-producing devices and products within the reach of all.

Comfortable furniture, such as chairs, davenports and beds that economize space, invite rest and make the home more attractive and more livable.

Hangings, decorations, curtains, pictures and rugs, lend warmth and color to the rooms. Modern lighting fixtures and lamps not only add to a room's attractiveness but also eliminate the danger of eye strain. Present-day heating equipment makes not only for greater heating efficiency and economy, but also increases comfort in the home by supplying moist air and the proper indoor temperature during even the coldest periods.

For the household that handles its laundry work in the home, modern laundry equipment not only relieves the home manager of irksome toil, but also cleanses more thoroughly and efficiently.

The greatly improved kitchen stoves and appliances now available eliminate drudgery and worry of working.

Just as modern mechanical equipment has served to make industry more efficient, modern household appliances not only save hours of the busy housewife's time, but make home-keeping a more pleasant and happy task. With modern housekeeping equipment house cleaning is no longer a seasonal activity, but a weekly one. The result is a healthier, happier and more comfortable home.

Our interest in the welfare of this community prompts us to sponsor this message to the people of

CHAPTER X —14— Out of Luck

"So far, Jack, you and Mr. Zaranko seem to have had most of the fun," pronounced my cousin Betty, as we sat at luncheon in the Kings' private sitting-room in the Pera palace.

"What interests me," said Hugh thoughtfully, "is how many of those Johannes you scragged last night."

"Only the one, I think," replied Nikka.

"You hit another chap," I reminded him.

"Yes, but two off their strength doesn't mean any great reduction in their fighting force."

"Still, counting in those two and the men they sent off with their women, as Nikka's puts reported, they'll be a good bit weaker than they were," argued Hugh.

"Just the same," insisted Betty, "we ought not to run any unnecessary risks."

"Who's we?" I inquired.

"See here, Jack," she flashed, "you might as well understand that I am in this and I am going to have my part in whatever we do."

"Hear, hear," Hugh applauded fervently.

Nikka laughed.

"How about it, Vernon?" I demanded of my uncle.

He spread his hands in a gesture of deprecation.

"My dear Jack," he said, "within reasonable limits, Betty's judgment is to be depended upon. Moreover, a not unimportant consideration is that she knows how to run a motor, and in our excursions in the Curlew her aid has been of some value."

"Don't be stuffy, Jack," urged Hugh. "Give the girl a chance. There are lots of things she can do, short of making it with your friend Toutou. I gather that Nikka's lady friend in the hostile camp was not adverse."

"That's a different matter," I interrupted, perceiving the embarrassment on Nikka's face.

We had slipped over Kura's personal interest in his fortunes. But even so, the incident, to quote Betty's analysis, was "romantic to the nth degree."

"I don't see that it is," asserted Betty stubbornly, "and I intend to put my part."

"Dare it all," I laughed. "You won't let up, will you? Well, have it your own way. What do you want to do?"

"Run you down the Bosphorus after dark for a look at Tokaji's house from the water side," she answered promptly.

Hugh intervened.

"There's no question in the minds of you two chaps but that any attack ought to come from the water front. Is there?" he asked.

"It couldn't very well come from the street," replied Nikka. "There's a high windowless wall and a strong door, and even in that lawless quarter publicity would attend an armed invasion of private property."

"Of course," said Betty, her head in the air. "It couldn't be any other way. Now tell us some more about the hiding-place of the treasure."

"What more can we say?" I answered. "There's the courtyard and the red stone."

"It would be a task of some diligence to pry loose the covering of the treasure chamber," King remarked.

"We have—or rather, I should say, Betty has—taken precautions to install on board the Curlew an equipment of crowbars, pick-axes, shovels, chisels and other tools."

"—and a knotted rope with a grapple on the end to help in going up the sea-wall," reminded Betty.

going to be victimized by a gang of foreigners."

"Well, whatever you are doing, I should prefer that you keep away from me in the future," said Hugh. "I can't afford to have the Jockey club stewards hear that I've been talking to you."

As it happened, the one episode in Hilger's life that linked his pride and aroused sore memories was his suspension from the privileges of the turf. The man was a sincere horseman, his racing ventures had been the breath of life to him, his disgrace and compulsion to enter his thoroughbreds under other men's colors had been a bitter blow. And he showed this feeling now. His face went dead-white; his nostrils pinched in.

"All right, Chesby," he said curtly, "I won't forget that."

And he disappeared into the bar.

"You were hard on him," said Nikka seriously. "After all, why should you mind anything that he can say?"

"He was hoping that Miss King was within hearing distance," retorted Hugh. "A dog like that doesn't deserve consideration."

"Some people believe a dog does deserve consideration," Lord Chesby said in a feminine voice behind us.

We turned to face Helene de Cespedes. The Countess Sandra Vassilievna was with her. Maudie Hilger, her true as ghostly as her husband's, was hurrying away from them.

"You may be enemies, but why should you make a woman cry?" added the Russian girl. "She will be unhappy the rest of the day."

"I'm very sorry," answered Hugh stiffly, "but do you sincerely believe that her husband is entitled to insult me in public?"

"It was a rotten thing, he said," admitted Helene frankly. "And of course, he is a rotter. But as I told you boys once, they are a queer pair, and Maudie—well, she really thinks that if they ever get into a state of affluence, they can both turn around and live straight. It's d-d-dilly, but—do you believe in fairies? Those who don't generally envy those who do."

"We don't believe in fairies," I answered, "and we don't believe in talking to a man who is a thief get away with a gratuitous insult."

"Oh, you're right," said Sandra Vassilievna impartially. "From your own point of view. But I'm going to tell Maudie that she'll only ruin her complexion if she weeps for what an offensively honest man says to her."

Helene laughed as the Russian walked off.

"Women are almost as funny as men, aren't they?" she said. "Oh, yes, before I forget it, Mr. Nash, you want to look out for that girl's brother. You slammed him one or two in that fight at Chesby, and he's had it in for you ever since. And after last night, all the men are wild. If that gypsy Tokaji catches you—pshaw! Oh, boy! And Toutou!"

"They weren't able to catch us last night," returned Nikka. "They aren't likely to have a good chance again."

"You put up a great fight," she agreed. "Oh, I'm handing it to you, all of you. You're the best little bunch I ever ran across. Say, I wouldn't believe an English lord could be so much of a hustler as you, Lord Chesby. Your uncle, he—"

She shrugged.

"What about my uncle?" asked Hugh eagerly. "You mind telling how your push got on to him?"

"No, I suppose there's no harm now," she answered slowly. "Poor old fellow! I was durned sorry he was croaked. We none of us—well, what's the use talking? That Toutou is a devil. Mr. Nash knows it. I only hope he and the rest of you don't get to know him any better. But about your uncle, Lord Chesby. He was a cluck. He ran around here like a kid in a game of 'taps-and-thieves'. Everybody knew he was up to something. The authorities thought he was just a nut. But when he took to snooping around Tokaji's house, our folks got wise to it. He might be on to something good. Tokaji's tribe have always had this tradition of a treasure—but you know about that. Tokaji had been working with us since before the war, and he realized this was more than he could tuck in. 'Inself, so he called on Toutou. Say, Mr. Zaranko, on the level now, did that girl of Tokaji's sell out to you last night?'

Nikka stared at her blankly, his face a perfect mask.

"We had a good deal of trouble with her," he returned. "Had to tie her up. She was right on our heels, with her knife."

Helene shook her head.

"Yes, that's true, but—I saw her this morning. Humph! Maybe I'm a fool. I told Toutou to mind his own business, and not mix into the tribe's affairs. Tokaji said she was all right, and that ought to be enough."

"God help Toutou if he went after her," I said facetiously.

Helene gave me a quick glance.

"Maybe you're right," she said. "I've often wondered what Toutou would do against a woman who would use a knife. He—he gets 'em in a different way. Well, I'm babbling, which is a sign of old age. Oh good boys, and give up before you get into serious trouble. As ever, your well-wisher, Helene."

And she tripped off.

"What a delightful criminal!" I remarked. "Somehow I don't mind so much the idea of being plucked by her."

"You're losing your perspective," growled Hugh, who was in a righteous frame of mind, partly because he was in love and partly because of his clash with Hilger. "A crook is a crook. They're all against us. I don't know but that the women are the most dangerous where you are concerned, Hugh. Why are you so d-d susceptible?"

At which I laughed, Nikka walking beside us, had no ears for our conversation. His thoughts were on that slim, brown, Tziganne maid about whom Helene de Cespedes had inquired. But he woke up a block farther on, when a big, turbaned figure stumbled past us, with a guttural exclamation from the corner of his mouth. At the next corner there was a traffic block, and we crowded casually around and watched Mikal.

"Tokaji's women and children are in camp beyond Boghazkeui on the edge of the forest of Belgrade," he murmured. "There are five men with them."

"If that Gypsy Tokaji catches you—pshaw!"

them. Five other men have left Sokaki Masyeri since morning. If Franks were there they have gone."

"It is good, my uncle," returned Nikka, affecting to speak to Hugh. Continue the watch. If there is more to report bid one of your young men lounge before the Khan where we are staying tomorrow in the forenoon."

"It shall be done," said the old man, and he bowed his way through our ranks as though in haste to cross over.

We led our escorts—for we took it for granted that we were under observation—a dilatory stroll, and arrived back at the Pera palace in time for dinner, which, as usual, we had served in the Kings' sitting room. It was a leisurely meal, for we had time to kill. There was an early moon and he wanted it to set before the Curlew left the Man-o-war landing, where it was moored.

It spied were still watching the boat, as I have no doubt they were, we gave them the slip. We went downstairs together, and shot into the closed car which was waiting. Watkins sitting beside the chauffeur. Ten minutes later we were up on the Curlew's docks, secure from observation because of the Hellish marine sentries who stood guard at the dock-gates.

The Curlew was a handy craft, decked over forward, with a roomy cockpit and a good, heavy-duty Mercedes engine. She was nothing to look at, but reliable and efficient. Betty, who was an experienced yachtswoman, automatically assumed command, and Hugh and Watkins as automatically accepted the role of crew. Vernon King, Nikka and I tried to be as inconspicuous as possible.

We clugged slowly through the glut of shipping in the Golden Horn, edging away from the Galata shore toward the picturesque bulk of Sinan-baul. Scamilla point loomed ahead of us, high, rugged, tree-covered, dotted with infrequent lights. We rounded it, the lighthouse twinkling on our star-board beam, and turned southwest into the Bosphorus, with the wide sweep of the Marimora just ahead. The steamer from Rodosto and other Marimoran ports steamed past us with a swish and gurgle. A related fishing-boat flapped by. Then we had the waters to ourselves.

"Have you the night-glasses, Hugh?" questioned Betty. "See if you can make out the St. Sophia minarets. And to us: 'That's our first family in making Tokaji's house.'"

Hugh leaned forward across the cabin roof, resting on his elbows, eyes glued to the glasses.

"Right O," he called back. "I'm on them—and I can see that big old tower of the sea walls that lies this side of the jets."

Betty cut off the engine.

"Fetch the sweeps, Watkins," she whispered. "We'll pull in. Quiet, everybody."

Hugh and Watkins unlimbered two heavy oars from the cabin roof and thrust them outward through earlocks riveted to the cockpit railing. Side by side, in unison, they pulled with a long, deliberate stroke, while Betty steered. It was as easy a task to move that launch across the swift-flowing tide of the Bosphorus, and it seemed no tedious time before the blurred mass of the shoreline, becoming visible to our unaided sight, furnished an index to the progress we were making.

Nikka and I, with the help of the glasses, plotted for the others the arrangement of Tokaji's establishment.

"The old wall between the two wings—between the bachelors' quarters and warehouse and the House of the Married—ought to be easy to climb," I concluded.

"The wall of the House of the Married is very irregular, too," added Betty. "We have passed it close in a number of times by daylight, and we all agreed an active man could climb it."

"That's a good idea," approved Nikka. "If you could enter by the House of the Married you could seize the valuable part of the position. Sound military strategy."

"Yes," assented Hugh, "you could consolidate your position—how the old lingo came, back, thought—and occupy the rest of the place as convenient. By Jove, if you didn't want to occupy it, you could—"

"Oh, you'd have to occupy it," I interrupted. "I say, do you know that place looks desert-?"

"There's somebody there, never fear," rejoined Betty.

"According to Nikka's uncle, a good part of the garrison were withdrawn today," returned Hugh.

"There is no use in hurrying," cautioned my uncle. "We shall have plenty of opportunities."

"There's a time like this, present," I said softly.

"Yes, they won't be looking for us so soon again," agreed Nikka. "They will be figuring that we had enough of a fright last night. What could be more unexpected than a raid from us tonight? They probably think that we will go slow after last night, and they don't even know we are out here."

"I wouldn't be too sure of that," rejoined Betty.

"Besides," I said, "their force is so depleted that we couldn't have a better opportunity."

"They may be reinforced."

"Nonsense," said Hugh. "Watty, bring out those tools. We shall want the rope for climbing—and a couple of crowbars. If we need anything else we can send back for it. Betty, you must stay in the boat; you can't climb that wall—and somebody has got to be ready to start the engine and get us away in a hurry."

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally. Else you have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Serious Problem Faced by Chinese Christians
In its war on superstition, which has involved the destruction of a number of temple idols, the Nanking government has aroused the Buddhists of Hankow, who, claiming that over drastic attacks have been made on their faith, have appointed a delegation to visit Nanking and to demand that a policy of no discrimination against Buddhism be adopted. The delegation declares that if religion is to be suppressed or religious property confiscated then they demand that all religions be treated on the same basis. The government, in accepting a petition from the Buddhists, has let it be known that the delegation will be given a hearing. Holding office under the government are many Chinese Christians who are now to be faced with the problem of agreeing to attack their own religion as well as find dishonor or else show why the Buddhists are being denied religious liberty.

Two Strange Seas

Scene on the Shore of the Caspian Sea.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)
THE world's two most important and best known bodies of water that lie below sea level are the Dead sea and the Caspian sea. The Dead sea is really a gigantic sinkhole. In no other continent is there such a deep depression in the earth's crust; nor will one find greater desolation or more uncomfortable conditions for man and most other living things even in the hearts of the greatest deserts.

The Hebrew scriptures have thrown an atmosphere of tragedy about this country. There, the chronicle states, were situated the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, destroyed by the wrath of Jehovah; and there the modern reader sees the blasted region, seared by unbearable heat, with its bitter death dealing waters, to prove the story to his satisfaction.

According to the Biblical narrative the Jordan valley and the plain near its mouth on the shores of the Dead sea where the destroyed cities lay shared the early good fortune of the Promised Land itself and "flowed with milk and honey." But an end was put to this pleasant condition by the rain of brimstone and fire.

The story of the region deciphered from its rocks by geologists begins much earlier than the days of the patriarchs whose actions are recorded in the Bible. This record seems to indicate that Palestine and the whole western end of Arabia rose ago in what the geologists term the Tertiary era. Shortly after the rise, it seems, a great slice of the land parallel to the coast of the Mediterranean sank to great depth, forming the huge rift valley, "the Ghor," now occupied by the Jordan river, and the Dead sea.

It is not clear whether there was a connecting channel between the Mediterranean and the great valley; but a well defined ancient beach indicates that in those remote times the great depression held a sea or lake at about the same level as that of the Mediterranean. The Jordan did not then exist; its entire valley as well as the sea of Galilee was swallowed up in the parent of the Dead sea, which was some 200 miles long and 10 to 15 miles wide.

Dead Sea Has No Outlet
It is believed that the climate of Palestine in remote times was moist and that the great inland lake was for a while kept at its highest point. When drier conditions set in the lake began to shrink, eventually retreating into the present position of the Dead sea and exposing the valley now occupied by the Jordan. This is practically the only large river in the world which flows in a valley ready-made for it almost from source to mouth.

The Dead sea depression having no outlet, all the salts contained in the large original inland sea were retained when evaporation reduced the volume of the body of water to its present dimensions. In addition, for hundreds of thousands of years the Jordan and the other streams and torrents that flow from the desert hills into the basin have been carrying in additional salts until now the waters of the Dead sea constitute one of the most highly concentrated natural brines in existence. It is estimated that on the average some six million tons of water flow into the Dead sea daily, and since the level of the sea changes but little, an equal amount is pumped out daily by evaporation.

The present Dead sea is 47 miles long and about 10 miles wide. Its surface lies approximately 1,300 feet lower than sea level and at its deepest point its bottom lies another 1,300 feet down. This great rift in the earth's crust, therefore, lies 2,600 feet below sea level and is the deepest hole in the land anywhere in the world. Because of the intense heat and dryness and the presence everywhere of salt the land immediately about the Dead sea is a region of desolation.

Because the intense heat and pressure often prove fatal to others than the few hapless Arab nomads that manage to survive in the region, this area has until recently not been intensively studied by scientists. It was at first thought that there is no evidence of recent volcanic action and that the traditional destruction of the cities by a rain of fire and brimstone may have referred to the explosion of pockets of crude petroleum. A scientist who visited the region in 1909, however, reported a small extinct volcano near the northeastern corner of the Dead sea near the reputed site of Sodom and concluded that a shower of ashes from this vent may have caused the catastrophe so vividly described in Genesis.

Caspian Sea Is a Puzzle.
The Caspian sea was thought, in the earliest periods of recorded time, to be part of the great "stream of ocean" surrounding the habitable earth. Herodotus, the Greek geographer, mentions a visit to it in 459 B. C., when it was no even greater mystery than today, for then no one knew its extent.

Some authorities claim that the Caspian had its origin in a great inland sea, an Asiatic Mediterranean, with an outlet to the Arctic ocean. In support of the Arctic outlet it is pointed out that seals are still hunted in the Caspian and there are other forms of life which show evidence of Arctic ancestry. It is argued that the Caspian owes its present size to climatic changes and evaporation. That the sea has reached other levels is evident by the number of terraces that can be seen back from the coast. However, to complicate matters, the weak development of the terraces indicates that the sea did not stand at any one level for a long time. Walls and cliffs have been found in many sections underneath the surface, an indication that the level of the water was even lower at one period than it is now.

Shifting shore lines are not the only eccentricities of the Caspian. Although 85 feet below the level of its neighbor, the Black sea, and with no known or possible outlet, the Caspian is less than half as salty. It is only three-eighths as salty as the ocean. Furthermore, the northern part, which receives large quantities of fresh water from the Volga, Ural and Terek rivers, is so slightly salty the water is quite drinkable.

The Black sea, with approximately an equal surface and almost the same climatic conditions, not only retains a constant level but is continually discharging at the Dardanelles. Yet the volume of water poured into the Black sea is not nearly so great as that which the Caspian receives. The Volga, alone, drains almost half a million square miles into the Caspian.

No other inland body of water is so richly stocked with fish, nor has as wide a range of species. The Caspian presents an intermingling of salt and fresh water forms. Before the World war the annual catch, including the seals of Krasnovodsk bay, was valued at more than five million dollars.

With an area equal to that of the state of California, or more than all the Great Lakes combined, the Caspian sea today occupies the deepest part of a great depression situated to the west and south of the Ural mountains. The northern or fresh water half is shallow, nowhere reaching a depth of more than 118 feet. The southern half, however, is cut by two deep depressions and soundings have reached 3,000 feet.

Coastal Strip Is Narrow.
Both the north and the east coasts are flat and hard to approach. Caucasus mountains on the west and the Elburz on the southern, or Persian, shore are close to the sea and leave only a narrow coastal strip. On this strip are most of the important cities of the region. Taken as a whole the Caspian is not an attractive body of water. Its shores are as barren as the granite boulders of its bordering mountains. As there is no fresh water above or below the surface of the ground near the southern coasts, the inhabitants must bring drinking water from long distances or condense sea water. One of the distinguishing features of towns along this part of the Caspian sea is the floating condenser plant, usually some worn-out steamer or sailing vessel. Sometimes the water is piped ashore, sometimes it is carried in tank barges and then peddled around the streets, as is milk in other cities.

Baku, the capital of the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan, is the largest city on the sea and the center of a prosperous, busy oil region. Its surroundings are like those of the nitrate towns along the coast of Chile, only the settlements are more numerous and better built. Before the war Baku was one of the most important cities in the Russian empire.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK
A. M., Sc. D.

"Nothing but a Cold."

A FATHER of a family of six, the youngest of whom was three years old, came home from work with a well developed cold. Being an affectionate individual he kissed his wife and all the children, making a particular fuss over the wee one. That was on Friday. Ten days later the baby was dead. The rest of the family, excepting one, had colds. That one had pneumonia.

It takes experiences like this to make one realize that "nothing but a cold" may indeed be very much something. "I didn't think that anything so common as a cold could possibly do any damage," lamented the father in the above case. And in so saying, he voiced the opinion of countless thousands who have little else than contempt for this ever present and universal affliction.

Nevertheless, colds deserve more than contempt. And not getting it, they frequently hit back. Indeed, it has been conservatively estimated that millions of hours and millions of dollars in wages are annually lost because of the public's lack of respect for a cold. And what is worse, the pneumonia fatalities traceable to unattended colds are almost staggering in number. Considered from all viewpoints, the common cold is in reality a very formidable adversary.

Unlike the many other maladies that lend themselves to official control, colds need to have little fear from that source. Not that health departments are disinterested. On the contrary, they are extremely concerned. Only they are helpless. Which means that the individual is the only person who can effectively do anything about this most important disease problem. Happily the observance of a few simple rules will materially diminish the cold's present power.

It must be understood that this type of infection is contagious. Therefore, anyone who is thus afflicted and falls to cough and sneeze into his handkerchief is decidedly, and most selfishly negligent. Then again, it is merely fundamental common sense to reduce intimate personal contacts to a minimum, when in this condition.

With eating utensils kept to one's self and not used to help feed the baby, and with reasonable personal aloofness practiced in the home, millions of secondary infections that manifest themselves in families could be eliminated. Take this for a cold fact. And act upon it the next time you are suffering with "nothing but a cold."

The Sun Can Hurt

IN SPITE of repeated warnings many thousands of foolish people still conclude that one can suddenly expose the tender skin to a summer's day dose of torrid sun and remain happy. Well, it simply cannot be done.

One must admit that it is great sport to jump out of a city office or home into the briny deep. But it must be as readily conceded that to insult nature by exposing one's delicate epidermis to the sun's rays until painfully blistered, is carrying one's enthusiasm beyond a reasonable length.

With the present sun fad so extremely and justly popular, it is probably excusable for many unthinking persons to imagine that one has but to stand limply naked in the sun's path and derive untold benefit. But the sun does not work that way.

While it is quite true that in tuberculosis and rickets and some skin diseases the direct rays of the sun have definite healing value, that fact does not justify any normal person in arguing that he will be immeasurably benefited by putting the sun violently and burningly to work on his short fourteen-day sojourn. Such an attitude is extremely silly.

As a matter of common sense the sun, even at its best, should occupy but a small part of the vacation program. New acquaintances, change of scene, outdoor air, reasonable eating and sufficient rest, are the main factors to be considered if a maximum of benefit is to be derived from the annual visit to mountain, lake or sea.

Be a sun faddist, if you will. But don't be a burnt one. Remember, the sun can hurt.

Fled From "High Life" to Congenial Company

Joseph Addison, who wrote the familiar hymn, "The Spacious Firmament On High," married the duchess of Warwick on August 9, 1710, and had a rather melancholy time of it for the remainder of his life.

"If you have any historical or biographical imagination at all," an article in the Minneapolis Journal stipulates, "perhaps you can reproduce in your mind the picture of the neat and classical figure of the essayist and poet as he escaped, now and then, from the uncomfortable glories of Holland house and made his way thankfully to the more comfortable little coffee house in Kensington where he was accustomed to meet Doctor Johnson and other eighteenth-century wits and sports and where he put in a pleasant evening ending mid drinking accompanied by intelligent conversation."

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.
